

Society for the Teaching of Psychology/Division Two Presidential Citation presented to
Ted Bosack

During the 123rd Annual Convention of the American Psychological Association, the Society for the Teaching of Psychology/APA Division Two is pleased to award you with this Presidential Citation in recognition of your life-long dedication to psychology, and especially to psychology teachers and to the teaching of psychology.

Your generous contributions to leadership at the local, regional, and national levels are well-known. Within Providence College, a sampling of your leadership contributions includes serving as the Department of Psychology Chairperson, a member of the Faculty Senate, and Chairperson of the college-wide reaccreditation self-study committee. Across the region, your leadership contributions are also renowned, including service as an active leader (chair or co-chair) for many years for the Northeast Conference for Teachers of Psychology (NECTOP), co-founder of Rhode Island Teachers of Psychology, and your service as President of the New England Psychological Association.

However, your contributions reach far beyond local and regional contributions. You have been an important leader in national conversations about the teaching of psychology. A sampling of these contributions include serving as Chair of the Council on Undergraduate Psychology Programs, participating in the National Forum on Psychology Partnerships (P3) at James Madison University, and service on key APA Task Forces. In addition, you served for many years as a Reader and Table Leader for the ETS Advanced Placement Exam in Psychology as well as a member of the College Board AP Psychology Development Committee.

Your service in multiple capacities for STP over many years has benefited the organization in ways too numerous to count. Since 2008, you have served as the Executive Director of STP, and it is in that capacity that many STP Presidents and Executive Committee members have seen and learned from your wise council and understated wisdom. Your quiet, often behind-the-scenes leadership and your generosity of spirit have earned you the respect, admiration, and friendship of your colleagues.

It is with great pleasure and gratitude that I present you with this Presidential Citation on behalf of your STP/Division Two colleagues and friends. Thank you for your lifelong dedication in the service of others on behalf of teachers of psychology everywhere.
